Art

On Wednesday 20th November, year 6 visited the Tate Modern. Located in Central London, the Tate Modern, is a contemporary art gallery filled with exciting and fascinating art work. It is free to visit and you can see famous paintings from artists such as the one and only Roy Lichtenstein! When we were walking around, we saw so many unique exhibitions which used different visual tools and focused on concepts relating to politics, world peace and our emotions. We cannot wait to visit again!

Rainbow Trust Children's Charity

To give the children further insight into how their Mitzvot (good deed) will impact young children across the UK, Lucy Miller from the Rainbow Trust delivered an assembly to the school on Thursday. Lucy explained to the children how their volunteers support young children and their families during difficult times. Our children were also able to suggest other ways that they can support the charity, which was lovely to hear.

Mitzvah Day

As I shared in last week's Newsletter, the whole school came together today as part of Mitzvah day to show our support for Rainbow Trust Children's Charity, a leading organisation that provides emotional and practical support to families who have a child with a life threatening or terminal illness. It was a joy to see all of our children working together to give thanks to the amazing volunteers that support families during such difficult times. I would like to say a big doh-dah (thank you) to all the staff for supporting the children and making the day a great success and to Miss Schurr for organising the day.
